Strategic Vision

For educators embodying meaning and coherence from the inside out.

Global, Inclusive,

Collaborative Approach

Supporting professional development in its interrelated components: physical, emotional, cognitive and spiritual (meaning).

Using somatic exercises and reflection, MUZA's global approach accelerates professional development. Educators embody their practices by working toward equilibrium and transformation while cultivating well-being and health. Embodiment is the relationship we maintain with our own bodies, the bodies of others and our environment.

Geneviève Emond

Facilitator and consultant in global and inclusive education
Ph.D (Éducation), M.A. (Danse), B.Ed.

I have been supporting global and inclusive education for more than 20 years, in national and international contexts. As a facilitator and coordinator of educational projects, I have created and developed innovative and original projects and programs. Because I am convinced that practices can only transform when people transform, I devote myself to help educators reinforcing the coherence and quality of their practices while participating to current social transformation efforts. I hold a Ph.D. in Education on teachers' embodiment.

Founded in 2003 in Geneva (Switzerland),
